

Monday October 17th
Student Panel starts at 11:30 am
International Community Potluck begins at 12:30 pm
Miller Hall, Room 112

Welcome to a new school year!

We, a group of international and domestic students and faculty interested in international education, are very excited to launch this academic year with two amazing back-to-back events:

A student-led panel on Advisor-Advisee Styles Around the Globe followed directly by our quarterly International Student Potluck.

Why are we doing this? The advisor-advisee relationship is a critical issue in postgraduate education in most countries, and it varies dramatically by context and geographical location. As the numbers of international students continue to grow at the College of Education, we felt it is important to learn more about adviser-advisee interactions in other parts of the world to understand better where our international students come from in order to make everyone's academic journeys here a little smoother.

EVERYONE is invited: We define ourselves as an inclusive group, committed to a call for social justice. We invite you to help us co-create a space for collaborative reflection to think about how our learning, teaching, and ways of acting may have been affected not only by our immediate surroundings, but also those beyond national borders. If you identify as a domestic student, come learn about your international peers!

Eat and build community: To further embrace the international student spectrum in the University of Washington, we are hosting our quarterly International Student Potluck. Food is a fabulous way to share culture and what better way to celebrate our diversity than by eating together! Please join us for a casual lunch and get to know our community better. You are encouraged to bring food to share though it is not required. Family and friends are always welcome.

Organized by International Educators of the College of Education \(IECE\), Teacher Education Research Interest Group \(TERI\), & Center for Innovation and Research in Doctorate Education \(CIRGE\).

Sponsored by Office of Student Diversity and Inclusion

Future events: CIRGE will host another discussion about adviser/advisee style in Asian countries in November. See more on <http://www.cirge.washington.edu/>